

Our Sample Schedule.

2026–27 · the real list, not a polished one

Every homeschool group has one question on repeat: "what curriculum are you actually using?" So here's ours — printed out, in case it's useful for shaping your own. The blanks are real too; we'd rather show you a true list with holes than a polished one that doesn't exist.

Both kids, daily — Chores, then reading, then journaling. Each kid works through their own Jent page during the week, then journals against it.

Son, 12.

His week

MONDAYS

DAILY

WEEKLY

Math — Art of Problem Solving. Instruction Mondays, practice daily, one-on-one tutor weekly.

WEEKLY

Book club with Dad — one book, a chapter a week, conversation over summaries.

ONGOING

Science, social studies & tech — our Minecraft world: tasks in the game, real projects outside it, approval to continue. He schedules it himself against due dates.

WEEKLY

Learning center once a week.

MORNINGS

Taekwondo mornings.

STILL SHAPING

Writing — still designing this one, honestly. Storytelling, published here on Jent, is the direction.

Daughter, 8.

Her week

3X A WEEK

Math — Beast Academy, practice three days a week. Adding a class: still deciding.

ONGOING

Science & social studies — the Minecraft world too, but hands-on with me. She's 8; the help IS the lesson.

STILL SHAPING

Writing — story writing and simple research, with me. Still shaping it.

Taekwondo mornings with her brother.

The blanks are real. We'd rather show you a true list with holes than a polished one that doesn't exist.
